Rosling King (RK) today announced it is expanding its presence in the City of London.

RK, which specialises in serving the needs of financial institutions and the real estate, private equity and construction sectors, has enjoyed significant growth across its core practice areas in the last year. To reflect this growth, RK has opened an additional office in Old Bailey, where the firm has been based for six years.

Owen Rafferty, senior partner, said: "In recent years there has been increasing demand for the range of services we provide. We have strengthened our teams across our practice areas and this expansion has led us to open new offices near our Old Bailey headquarters. The sectors in which we operate are as active as ever and we look forward to continuing to provide our clients with the high levels of personal service they expect."
